

THE REPARATION WORKERS

Interesting Gossip Gleaned Among Employees of Government Bureaus.

SAW ADVANTAGES OF CARD SYSTEM YEARS AGO

Something of the Labor of Mr Horace J. Gambrell, Keeper of Records, Middle Division, Pension Office—Reminiscences in Life of Colonel John Rouser.

Mr. Horace J. Gambrell, keeper of records in the middle division of the Pension Office, was appointed from North Carolina nearly twenty-five years ago. He was one of the first to see the advantages of the card system known as records as opposed to books, and it is largely owing to the beautiful and accurate manner in which the records of the middle division are kept that the system is being adopted throughout the Bureau.

Mr. Gambrell is a civil war veteran, but looks as though he could render the Government valuable service for many years to come.

Col. John R. Rouser, the Deputy Register of Wills, has been a prominent figure in Maryland for many years. He was born at Mechanicstown, Frederick county, in 1823. At twenty-four years of age he gave his allegiance to the Union, enlisting in the Sixth Maryland as a private, in August, 1862. He was immediately elected and commissioned first lieutenant, and was continuously in the service in the Valley of Virginia until the spring of 1864, when he was promoted to captain.

His regiment then went into the Wilderness campaign, participated in all the important battles, particularly the Wilderness, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, and Lee's Retreat. Captain Rouser was twice wounded in action, and as lieutenant colonel in this campaign for gallantry in action. He was severely wounded at the battle of the Wilderness. He was captured in the hands of the Confederates in the fall of 1864, and was a prisoner of war in Libby. He was mustered out with this regiment in June, 1865.

After the war Colonel Rouser entered actively into politics, and was elected to the Legislature on the Union ticket in 1867. He was postmaster of his home town from 1869 to 1873. He was then elected register of wills of Frederick county, which office he held for six years. He was also appointed school trustee for his home district in 1875, and has held that office to the present time, notwithstanding the changes in the political complexion of the school board, being also during most of the time a business man and president and director of local corporations. Colonel Rouser was re-elected to the Legislature in 1890, 1892, and 1894. He has been a member of the character at county, State, and Congressional conventions for years, presiding over some of the more important ones. He was appointed Deputy Register of Wills in July, 1900.

Colonel Rouser is known in his community as a man of sterling integrity, general character, and is noted for his many acts of charity. He is universally respected and loved by those who have been known him. He has made many friends in his present office. Colonel Rouser is prominent in Grand Army circles. His name, however, is not to be found on Uncle Sam's pension rolls, nor ever made an application for a pension.

Speaking of the National Museum, Secretary S. P. Langley said: "Of the several bureaus of the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum is of most general interest and the administration of its business demands the most care. The primary object of the Museum is the acquisition, preservation, and classification of the collections of the institution and the Government, which relate to nearly every branch of human knowledge. The placing of these, when arranged by their curators, on public exhibition in such a manner as best to afford to visitors an opportunity to acquire accurate general information concerning them serves not only as a source of instruction but also as a source of entertainment to the public. The foundation of the Museum collections was the number of ethnological and biological objects brought to the United States more than half a century ago by the various explorations, and the collection made by explorers for the Smithsonian Institution, to whose care these materials and every other object of natural history has since been referred. The preservation and classification of these objects was the work of those who for a number of years and charge of the Government collections in the United States Patent Office, and when these were transferred to the custody of the Smithsonian Institution and were placed on exhibition by the museum, large collections were added to the Museum, there came gradually into existence a store of valuable objects, which were, however, unaccountably neglected and often duplicated, but frequently unrelated owing to the mode of their acquisition. At the close of the Centennial Exhibition of 1876 at Philadelphia a great number of collections, chiefly of industrial interest, became the property of the Smithsonian Museum. For the accommodation of these objects a one-story building was begun in 1879 and completed in 1881, containing an area of about 20,000 square feet, and built in the cheapest manner. This structure was so entirely inadequate to the object, for which a building of six or six stories over the same area would have been sufficient, that within two years from its completion was found to be too limited for the display of the exhibits then actually on hand. While, as has been observed, by far the greater portion of the treasures of the Museum have been acquired by purchase, explorations or by gifts from the people of the United States and to foreign countries, and while the people may take just pride in what they feel is their own, collections gathered in this way are not only partially duplicated or triplicated, but are at the same time fragmentary and lacking in that completeness which comes from systematic work in bringing similar classes of objects together under one well-considered system."

Mr. E. P. Seabey, a native of Maine, is the member of the watch who asks all persons visiting the State, War and Navy Department Building after 2 o'clock in the afternoon what their business is, and informs all who have no important mission to perform that the building is closed to callers. He was appointed to the department seven years ago, since which time he has become acquainted with an innumerable number of persons, most of whom are prominent men from various parts of the United States. He is a veteran of the war of the rebellion, having enlisted in the Sixteenth Maine Infantry Regiment in 1862, and carried the musket in the defense of "Old Glory" until the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox Courthouse. During his service for his country he participated in the battle of Five Forks, South Side Road, Boynton Plank Road, Hatcher's Run, and Gravelly's Run, besides a large number of minor skirmishes. He entered as a private, but by strict attention to duty he was advanced to the rank of sergeant in which grade he was mustered out. Besides being at a number of national events with his company, he was in line when the grand review of the Union troops was held in this city in 1865. Between the time he was mustered out of the army until he received his appointment to the department, he taught school in his native town, and for a long time was a clerk in the old Census Office. Prior to his army life he spent his time in California in mining and fruit raising.

Mr. James Campbell, of the superintendent's office of the State, War, and Navy Department Building, who has charge of the laboring force at that building, has had an unusual career. He entered the United States Navy in 1859 and was honorably discharged in 1885, after having served on various stations and ships. He was a member of the Greely Relief Expedition, which in 1884 started out under command of Rear Admiral Vinland Scott to land the U. S. S. Bear, to locate General Greely and his party in the Arctic region, and which was rewarded by finding the American explorers near Cape Sabine, with seven out of twenty-five persons alive. Mr. Campbell is about the only living member of the party which brought the "Polar Monument" located at the front of the Capitol, from Lehigh, near Rome, Italy, to this country on the sailing ship Supply. He is the possessor of many interesting stories of the trip which he tells among his friends.

At the office of the Division of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture are hundreds of samples of sorghum gathered from every part of the United States and Territories. Speaking of this Mr. A. A. Denton, who was charged by Secretary Wilson with making an exhaustive investigation into the subject said: "Sorghum syrup is produced in forty-four States and Territories. So far as can be judged from numerous samples, the States which border on the Gulf, where the annual rainfall is seventy inches, often produce inferior sorghum syrup. The States of the far North is usually of a better quality, the semi-arid region, where the annual rainfall is twenty to thirty inches, generally produce inferior syrup. The best syrup is produced where the growing seasons are more uniformly favorable, where the soil is not too dry, and on soils of moderate fertility. A good growing season followed by a moderately dry ripening season, seems best in any climate. For various reasons syrup made in the far North is usually of a better color, of milder flavor and more palatable than syrup made in the South. Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, and the part of Texas south of these States, produce the largest acreage of sorghum and the cheapest cane; the canes produce denser, richer, but often less pure, and consequently inferior syrup to that of States less subject to extremes of drought and flood. The annual production of sorghum in the United States is about 25,000,000 gallons, of a value of at least $10,000,000."

"There were a dozen countries at the time the best statistics were received," said Mr. Frank H. Hitchcock, of the Treasury Department, "to each of which the United States during the year exported over $10,000,000 worth of domestic farm produce. Chief among these countries were Great Britain and Germany, the former purchasing to the value of $10,000,000, and the latter to the value of $13,000,000. Our agricultural exports to the United Kingdom were the largest on record, excepting those of the extraordinary year 1898, when a value of $42,000,000 was attained. In our trade with Germany the exports for 1900 were decidedly in excess of any previously reported. Compared with the shipments of 1898, which were valued at less than $72,000,000, they show an increase of nearly 100 per cent. After the United Kingdom and Germany, the principal foreign market for American farm produce during the year 1900 was that afforded by the Netherlands, in which country exports valued at $52,000,000 were sent. These figures were exceeded only in 1899 and then by less than $1,000,000. As contrasted with the record of 1898, which was $1,000,000, they show a decided gain. France ranked fourth in importance, and Belgium fifth. Among our foreign markets in 1900 the Netherlands country received agricultural exports to the value of $48,000,000 and the latter to the value of $33,000,000. In comparison with the trade of 1898, our exports to each of these destinations displayed an important growth, the shipments to France during that year having a value of only $23,000,000, and those to Belgium a value of little more than $19,000,000. Our exports, however, both to France and Belgium, attained a higher value in 1900 than in either of the preceding years, the record for the former country being $75,000,000 and that for the latter $37,000,000. Our total exports of domestic farm products to Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands in 1900 had an aggregate value of over $20,000,000, as compared with only $6,289,000 in 1898. The gain in these exports during the succeeding five years exceeded 200 per cent."

Cost of Monument Limited to $500,000, Including the Pedestal. Prizes for Four.

Twenty sculptors have notified the commission in charge of the selection of a site and the erection of a statue of Gen. George B. McClellan, that they will compete. They will enter models in the competition before May 1. No further entries will be accepted, as the time for entering expired on February 1.

The cost of the statue and pedestal is limited to $50,000, including all expenses attached to the erection of the monument. The models must be capable of execution for $50,000. The commission consists of the Secretary of War, Senator Watson, chairman of the Joint Committee on Library, and Brig. Gen. George D. Ruggles, U. S. A., retired, chairman of the McClellan statue committee of the Society of the Army of the Potomac. Mr. Merritt O. Chance, private secretary to Secretary Root, is secretary of the commission, and Col. ONLY TWO NIGHTS MORE.

Elks Carnival to Close to Successful Close Tomorrow.

The great Elks Carnival, which has so charmed Washingtonians and visitors from other cities, is rapidly drawing to a close. But two more nights and a matinee tomorrow remain. The Elks are confident that when their accounts are straightened up at the close of the doors on Saturday night they will have realized a greater amount from the enterprise than has any other organization in this city from a similar affair.

And with its waning life the Carnival grows in popularity. The crowds in attendance last night were by far the largest that have yet sought admission to the great hall. It is estimated that fully 10,000 people entered the various shows on the midway. Men and women laid aside their dignity for the occasion and gave themselves up to a genuinely enjoyable time.

From the opening of the doors at 8 o'clock until their final closing at nearly midnight, the hall rang with the laughter of the "best people on earth," mingled with the roar and crash of the bands, the bellowing of the animals, and the shouts of the "barkers." Every attraction in the place was in full blast.

The night was made a special occasion, being set aside as "Elks night." Crowds of persons from B. P. O. E. Lodges in various cities and towns throughout Maryland and Virginia were present and joined in the fun.

Tonight Col. Dick Plunkett, of Oklahoma, and a band of redskins, dressed through the Carnival.

ENTERTAINMENT FUND.

Subscription for G. A. R. Encampment Nearly $40,000.

It is confidently expected by the Business Men's Association that by tomorrow night the fund for the entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic at its annual encampment will reach an amount exceeding $40,000.

The sum is now well up in the thirty thousands, and the contributions are still rapidly coming in. The detailed list of the subscribers to the fund has not yet been made public and will not be until Monday or Tuesday.

There is no longer the slightest doubt that when the executive committee of the Grand Army meets in this city on the 15th of February the committee will be amply able by figures to show the members and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that the business men of this city are capable of taking care of the veterans.
